Dear Mr. Steer,

The CATV has followed, with a great deal of interest, the growing use of GPS while traveling on ATVs and other conveyances and even on foot or horseback. GPS's can be extremely helpful when traveling on trails in areas you are not familiar with provided the person trying to use the device knows the proper way to use it. Because of the obvious 'safety' benefits related to knowing where you are if there is a problem, it is clear that understanding how to use a GPS properly is very advantageous.

The CATV is pleased to be advised of the GPS certification course that the Canadian Ecology Centre offers as another important initiative to improve rider safety on the trails and protection of the environment. The CATV will advise all ATV provincial federations of this accredited GPS certification course and encourage their members and associated clubs to participate in such a program.

Please accept my best wishes.

Sincerely,

Robert Ramsay
President
